A BIRD'S EXPERIENCE.

I lived first in a house,
And lived there very well;
The world to me was small and round,
And made of pale blue shell.

I lived next in a tall tree's nest,
Nor needed any other;
I thought the world was made of straw,
And brooded on my mother.

One day I fluttered from my home
To see what I could find;
I said "The world is made of leaves;
I have been very blind."

At last I flew beyond the eaves,
Quite out of grown-up doors;
I don't know how the world is made,
And neither do my neighbors.

A SAILOR'S OPINION OF A COMET.

We were told by a celebrated naval officer the following anecdote: On one of his cruises the sailors saw a comet, and were somewhat surprised and alarmed at its appearance. The lances met and appointed a committee to wait on the commander to ask his opinion of it. They approached him and said:

"We want to ask your opinion, your honor."

"Well, my boys, what is it about?"

"We want to inquire about that thing up there."

"Now, before I answer you, let me know what you think of it?"

"We, your honor, we have talked it over, and we think it is a star sprung a leak."

WANTED TO KNOCK SOMEBODY

I went into a Fifth Avenue shoe store the other day for the purpose of procuring a copy of Christopher North's well known Noctes Ambrosiana. The first person I encountered was a red-haired clerk, to whom I said:

"Have you Noctes Ambrosiana?"

"Wh-wh-what do you say?" he asked, with mouth and eyes wide open.

"I asked to ascertain if you have Noctes Ambrosiana?"

"I don't exactly—that is, I don't understand—knocked his—what do you say?"

"I say that I understood that you had Noctes Ambrosiana. If you haven't, why don't you say so at once?"

"I don't know what you mean. I never did such a thing in my life."

"Perhaps you don't understand me. I wish to see if you have Noctes Ambrosiana. Christopher North's Noctes Ambrosiana."

"O, he has, has he? Why, I don't care a cent if he has. You've come to the wrong shop. You must be crazy. I tell you I know nothing; you haven't—I'll be cursed if I stand cursing and swearing a certain he rear of the store). "Say, sir, there's a fellow that's looking around here wantin' to know some body. Get a police-man quick."

A BRAVE DAUGHTER.

The family of Darcy, of Northamptonshire, bears for a crest a woman's head crowned with a helmet, the throat-piece close, the visor thrown up, and her hair flowing and dishevelled. Its origin was as follows: In the latter part of the fourteenth century a brave knight, named Talbot, had a serious dispute with Sir Jasper Kingscale, concerning the title of a valuable piece of land; and, as a last resort, the rival claimants agreed to meet upon the disputed territory and settle the matter by a combat at arms. Talbot was well advanced in age, and, upon the morning of the appointed day, he found himself sick with gout, and in such pain that he could not even arise from his chair. In this emergency, his daughter Agnes, who loved her father's honor very dear, and who desired much to regain the land, armed herself in the knight's armor, and upon her father's well known charger, and bearing a lance which she had often used in ring sport, went forth at the time appointed and met Kingscale. The fight was stubborn, but the maiden's superior suppleness and limberness prevailed over the knight's greater physical strength, and in the end she dismounted him. Quickly leaping from her saddle, she drew her dagger, but Kingscale had no desire to renew the combat; and, when he had acknowledged himself vanquished, his opponent loosened her throat-piece and lifted up the helmet, thus letting down her flowing tresses upon her shoulders and discovering her sex. The lady afterwards married into the Darcy family, and in honor of this chivalrous and heroic act her descendants have used the above crest with the motto, "Gilea spes salutis," which is, free rendered, "In this helmet we trust our honor."

EARLY RISING.

Early rising, in civilized society, always tends to shorten life. Many a farmer's boy has been made an invalid for life by being made to get up at daylight, before his sleep was out. Many a young girl has been stinted in body and mind and constitution by being made to get up before the system has had its full rest. All who are growing, all who work hard, and all weakly persons should not get up until they feel as if they would be more comfortable to get up than to remain in bed; that is the only true measure of sufficiency of rest and sleep. Any one who gets up in the morning feeling as if he would give anything in the world to remain in bed a little while longer, does violence to his own nature, and will always suffer from it—not immediately, it may be, but in after years, by the cumulative effects of the most unwise practice. In any given case, the person who gets up in the morning before he is fully rested, will actually lose that much of the energy requisite for the day's pursuits.

As a people, we do not get enough sleep, we do not eat enough, rest, we will not take time for these things; hence our nervousness, our instability, our hasty tempers, and the premature giving out of the mass of the people. Half of us are one-and-three-score, the very time that a man ought to be in his mental, moral, and physical prime. Half our wives, especially in the farming districts, die long before their time, because they do not get rest enough, sleep enough, to their labor. Nine times out of ten, it would be better for a family if the farmer should get up and light the fire and prepare breakfast for his wife, she coming directly from her toilet to the meal as table, because it almost always happens that she has to remain up to set things right long after the husband has gone to bed, when really she has nothing to do after supper but to go to bed. This is a monstrously erroneous imposition on wives and mothers.—Hall's Journal of Health.

FOR LADIES ONLY.

Blackwood says that the act of matrimony or [illegible] is written so legibly in a man's appearance, that no ingenuity can conceal it. Everywhere there is some inexplicable instinct that tells us whether an individual whose name, fortune, and circumstances are totally unknown to us, or be not, a married man. Whether it is a certain subduedness, such as that which characterizes jealousies in a menagerie, and distinguishes them from the lords of the desert, we cannot tell; but the truth is so, we positively affirm."

Twins are said to be on the increase all over the country. Oh gemini!

An Iowa justice, to encourage matrimony, has reduced his fee to 25 cents per couple.

San Francisco now pays women teachers in the public schools the same salaries as men.

A Brooklyn girl has just rejected a suitor because his arm wasn't long enough to go round her. She says if she is going to have a lover at all, she means to have a good fit.

The wife of Rev. Henry W. Lane has taken, with her husband, the entire course in the Baptist Theological Seminary, at Newton, Mass., and received the usual degree—the first ever conferred on a woman by that institution. Both are under appointment as missionaries.

There has been more or less curiosity in the minds of heiress-hunters as to the status financially of adopted daughters, but the Massachusetts Supreme Court came to the relief of both parties with a recent decree that a legal adopted child is, by the statutes, an heir to property the same as if it had been born in lawful wedlock. This decision gives an adopted girl $100,000 right in trust, which was to be distributed at the death of a man to his heirs-at-law or "issue." The court decided that in giving the property to the wife it was void, as the master of it could not revoke the original settlement to his "issue."

In Philadelphia every lady is a centurion. Everything in that city is centuplicated; wherever you go, whatever you do, the centennial stares you in the face; you have to wear it on your collar, and wash your hands with centennial towels and soap. The whole name is a farce, as it would seem to suppose it was to happen but once in a hundred years; but in the City of Brotherly Love, it seems they are to keep it up forever. The girls have powdered their hair to make them look a hundred years older; the old women have powdered theirs to make them look like the young girls. On a careful estimate, there are about 220,000 Martha Washington costumes in that city, which costume consists of about three yards of flounced curtain calico, a mob cap, a black patch under the left eye, and a seventy-five cent pair of ring-necked slippers.—Capital.

The Atlantic went across in eight days, and here is an extract from a letter of one of her passengers: "Mrs. Sartoris never left her stateroom but once on the passage. She came on deck of a few minutes one morning in a blue wrapper and a white shawl, but before it was we known that she was out, she had disappeared again. Mr. Sartoris did no share this seclusion, but was around most of the time. She said his wife was not 'seasick' but 'homesick.' Poor Nellie! we could all of us understand that she might be, for of all the cultivated youths who start their lair in the mildest fancy it's your cultivated who always goes first, Sir. A gerfalcon, the critics and the rest of it, Sartoris is the quietest. While we waited our turn at the docks in Liverpool, he, with some others, went ashore and bought mutton-chops, so that the first real good hot meal Nellie Grant Sartoris had after she came aboard, was standing resting on her husband's arm, her eyes full of trusting affection, her heart full of confiding love, and her mouth full of Liverpool mutton-chop."

Here is something from the Book of Beauty that is strictly local here as elsewhere: "A handsome leg is a rarity, we take it, in most saints, impossibility, among American women. The reason of this is the place where they wear their garters. No French woman, no thing is woman of cultivation, now-a-days wears her garters below the knees. It is ruinous to the shape of the calf. More than this, it has serious consequences of another kind. The principal vein of the leg, vena sabhrenabrevis runs just beneath the skin until it nearly reaches the knee, when it sinks beneath the muscles. Now, if this is constricted at its angles, joint by a tight garter, the blood is checked in its return to the heart, the feet are easily chilled, and, more liable to disease; the other veins of the leg are swollen into large knots, become varicose, as it is called, and often break, forming obstinate ulcers. This is a picture which a physician sees every day. With the garter fastened above the knee, all this pain and woe firmly is avoided; but it is still better to wear no garter at all, and to suspend the stockings by tapes around the waist. In this case, however, a well-fitting stocking is needed."

A LADY LAWYER.

About the year 1776, Nicholas Linguet, the celebrated Parisian journalist and lawyer, was at the height of his fame. He enjoyed a great reputation for his skill in getting up cases, and for surrounding them with such dramatic accessories as were likely to tell on the minds of excitable French Judges. One day, a beautiful lady, Madame de Fortune, came to ask his professional services in an action about some land, which she wished to bring against the Marshal Duke de Brogle, a great-grandfather of the present minister. Linguet had scarcely heard her to the end, when he said: "You are so lovely, madame, that your face is worth a speech in itself. What I propose is this: I will write a speech. You shall learn it by heart, and then rehearse it to me. When you deliver it in court you must be dressed in a light blue silk, the color best suited to your style of beauty, and if you speak as I shall direct you, I defy any, hence to French Judges, to refuse the demand." The event proved that Linguet knew human nature and his own countrymen well. Madame de Fortune turned out the most apt of scholars. She learned her speech thoroughly, and delivered it with all the grace of style and manner that might have been expected from a finished actress. It lasted seven hours, and seven hours she held the Judges entranced. She carried her cause without a dissenting voice.

AGASSIZ AND HUGH MILLER.

Hugh Miller, whose name is world-wide, was first brought to the notice of scientific men by Prof. Agassiz. At a meeting of the British Scientific Society, Miller, who was then a common day laborer, approached Agassiz with a specimen of rock in his hand, and began to make certain inquiries concerning it. During the conversation that ensued, Agassiz discovered that this common day laborer was possessed of a large fund of geological information, which he had acquired by personal investigations, inaccessible to any but the initiated votaries of the science. Agassiz was delighted at meeting him, and introduced Miller to the members of the society, explaining the manner in which he had become acquainted with him. The friendship thus formed continued through their lives, and Agassiz broke the introduction to Hugh Miller's first published work.

A beautiful incident of woman's love has just occurred in Liverpool. A woman, to screen her husband, who was charged with removing the end of her nose, swore she bit it off herself.

An industrious citizen of Dunkirk, unable to earn his wife in the day time, plants his potatoes in the evening by moonlight; what surprised his wife Monday morning was—what has become of those tough nuts?

The remark of a little eight year old on Monday, was in accordance with the wish of many people. "Mother," he said, "I wish was just like a hen-coop, out of doors, and then the breeze could blow right through me."

The son of an Emir had red hair, of which he was ashamed, and endeavored to dye it. But his father said, "Nay, my son, rather believe in such a manner that all fathers should wish their sons had red hair."

At a collection made at a charity fair, a lady handed the plate to a rich man well known for his stinginess. "I have nothing," was his curt reply. "Then take something, sir," she answered; "you know I am begging for the poor."

Because he had been successor to Sam Barton, Vermont, than committed suicide, declaring that life was not worth living now that his name was not good for $29. He could not want to live any longer. Such sensitiveness is extreme rare in America, and our readers in finding one must not be misled by any isolated case like this.

A clergyman and a young lawyer were conversing about the doctrine of transmigration of the souls of men into animals. "Now," said the judge, "suppose you and I were turned into horses and an ass, which would you prefer to be?" "The ass to be sure," replied the lawyer. "Why," asked the judge, "because I have heard of an ass being a judge, but a horse never."

A young woman named George, was engaged to be married, but was financially unable to call in the minister. His affianced wanted the affair brought to a final, but George sent her off with promises, saying that he was not able to marry, etc., etc. Finally she said, "Dear George, I am willing to marry you, if we have to live on bread and water." "We, we," cried "George," in desperation, "you furnish the bread, and I'll try and skirmish around and hunt up enough water."

Charles Lamb would not allow any great ability or wit, and, apostrophizing Dance, he said: "This is our peculiar and house to our planet; wanting it, what savage, unsocial beings must our ancestors have been, wintering in caves and unillumined fastnesses! They must have lain about and grumbled at one another in the dark. What heartless courtesies have passed, when you must have sat about for a smile, and dance a neighbor's cheek to be sure to be understood. Jokes came in with dances."

In 1828, the London papers record the singular will of an English testator, named Garland, containing the following clause: "I bequeath to my monkey, my cleaning and amusing Jocko, the sum of ten pounds sterling per annum, to be employed for his sole and exclusive use and benefit; to my faithful dog, Spado, and my well-beloved cat, Tib, a pension of five pounds sterling; and, I desire that in the case of the death of either of the three, the deceased pension shall pass to the other two, between whom it is to be equally divided. On the death of the three, the sum appropriated to this purpose shall become the property of my daughter, Gertrude, to whom I give this preference among my children on account of the large family she has, and difficulty she has in bringing them up."

One day, at the principal theatre of Athens—the theatre in which the Athenians appreciated the verses of Æschylus, of Euripides, and Sophocles—a mountebank appeared, who, by his imitations, immediately won the applause of the public. And what was the peculiar merit by which he succeeded in charming his refined and critical audience? It was his surprising skill in imitating the cries of animals. His marvelous talent in this direction was the delight of people who would hiss a public speaker who ventured to utter an ill-perfect pronunciation. "Curious! the thing is not so difficult!" said a peasant of Attica one day, astonished to see such encomiums so lavishly bestowed. The spectators were furious, and evinced a disposition to chastise the presuming critic; and it was only by promising to come the following day and make a trial of skill with the mountebank, that he was allowed to go unarmed. The next day the theatre was crowded. When the peasant entered, he was greeted by a storm of cries and hisses. Quiet having been restored, the mimic imitated the cry of an Indian dog; the audience applauded frantically. Now came the peasant's turn, and his cry was received with convulsive hisses. He showed no anger, and cunningly took from the basket which he had brought with him a fig he had undertaken to sell. "You see," said he, "it is [illegible] Nature and [illegible]

An injunction Suit brought by Messrs. Dickerson & Rice, of the Colorado City Mills against the Colorado Springs Company, was dismissed on by Judge Elbert on Wednesday last. The object of the suit was to prevent the Company from taking water, for their Irrigating Canal, from the fountain, the plaintiffs claiming a prior right to the water for use in their Mill Race.

Judge Davidson, who appeared on behalf of the Company, entered a demurrer, and argued the right of the defendants to the water, on the ground that natural wants are superior, in their claims, to artificial wants, and that, in an arid country like this, where irrigation is necessary to the cultivation of the soil and therefore to the production of the means of subsistence, those who require water for that purpose have a claim which can in no case be set aside by those who—as the defendants in the case under consideration—require it merely for mechanical purposes.

Judge Elbert refused the injunction, and, in doing so, gave force and emphasis to the argument submitted by Judge Davidson, holding that, in this country, the requirement of water for the purposes of irrigation is a natural want, and consequently supersedes all artificial wants.

Thus, it would seem that the "prior rights" of the Colorado City Mills, which have been held up as a bug-bear, now and again, ever since the foundation of the Town, have no actual existence.

Inasmuch, as the proprietors have brought an action against the Company for $25,000 damages, and as that action is still pending in the District Court, we refrain from any further comments on this particular matter. The general principle, however, which has been laid down, is an important one, and one which has a significance for all parts of the Territory. It seems to us to be eminently logical and just. As the foundation of all wealth, as the foundation, indeed, of all existence, lies the fruitfulness of the soil, and that, above all other things, needs to be guarded and fostered. It would be an unwise policy, and an unwise law, if it existed, which would debar the owner of grain-fields from irrigating his crops because the owner of a grist-mill wanted the water to drive his burrs. Without the grain-fields where would be the use of the mill? Unless the former flourish, the latter can be of no service.

There is, moreover, another argument why the claims of the Fields and Gardens should have pre-eminence over those of the Mills. For the former nothing but water will serve; the latter can get along very well without it. We have abundance of coal in the Territory to drive all the mills which can ever be erected: we have but a limited Water-supply, and shall need to make the very best of it for agricultural purposes, unless our future States is to be continually impoverished by sending to distant markets for a large proportion of its food.

Messrs. True & Sutton have shipped a large quantity of goods to the Ute Indian Agency at Los Pinos, during the past weeks.

The arrivals at the Colorado Springs Hotel during the week have been 132; at the Central, 86. The Hotels and Boarding-Houses generally are doing well.

Mr. W. H. Stancard has just received, during the week, a large invoice of Boots and Shoes. We learn that he has already done an extensive business, and keeps three men constantly employed.

To-day, 125,000 pounds of wool have been shipped from this point. Most of this has been consigned to Mr. P. C. Hunt, of Denver, Agent for a Boston House.

It is good to see old familiar faces again. People now and then leave their departure from here, in search of a better, but most of them come back. It is a good thing for people to know when they are well off.

A circular from the Hotel people of Beverly R. Kelm, a Kansas City capitalist, for choice specimens of Colorado agricultural and mineral products, which will be exhibited at various points throughout the country, and it is to be hoped a prompt and liberal response will be made.

The Second Adventists now announce that the world will come to an end in 1901. The announcement has given a terrible scare to some of our people who are getting on fast middle life.

The Greeley people are in trouble, because they can't get water enough for their crops and their Town grass-hoppers are vexing the souls of the Bonner County farmers; the Shade-trees of Denver are starving in the drought; the Divide is thereabouts "burnt up" by the fervent heat. Isn't Colorado Springs the best place after all?

The Denver World says there is a large amount of sickness in that city which is entirely attributable to the filthy condition of the streets and alleys.—Respectfully submitted to the Chairman of our own Board of Health, in the hope that he will have some of the filthy places of Colorado Springs speedily made clean.

If we have a Pound-Master (of which fact we are somewhat in doubt)—we should like him to know that cattle are in the habit of wandering round the streets and tearing down the lower branches of the Shade-trees. If we haven't a Pound-Master, the Town Trustees would do well to appoint one, or to take some other steps for the protection of the trees.

The Colorado Springs Company, having laid out two outlying tracts—at the north and south ends of Wahsatch Avenue—into Residence Lots, so that the whole of the lots, 39 in number, on Saturday last. This, we believe, is the largest sale of lots which has yet been made in a day.

The Denver News says: "An illustration of the carrying capacity of the narrow-gauge freight cars was furnished on Wednesday, when the Rio Grande Company shipped eighty-five Government mules from Denver to Pueblo, the whole lot being comfortably transported in six cars.—When it we known the fleetness of a Government mule is taken into consideration, this item has a deeper significance than appears on the surface.

We are indebted to Mr. B. F. Gurnsey for a half-a-score of his Views of Pike's Peak. They include pictures of the Falls in Bear Creek Canon, the Mystic Lake, the Abyss of Desolation, the Crater, the Bottomless Pit, the Perpetual Snow, and the Summit Signal Station. The Summit Views are remarkably fine—the fore-grounds sharp and distinct, and the distances soft and infinite. One or two of the pictures have fine cloud effects.

The new Colorado Monument, on the Denver and Rio Grande Railway is prospering. The trees set out in the spring are growing finely. Buildings are springing up rapidly, and the coming Fair bids fair to be a great success. A project is under way for the construction of a wagon road from Montmorenci to Bergen's Park, seven miles distant, which, when completed, will open up for settlement large tracts of fertile and in the various valleys on the line of the proposed road, and will afford tourists the best facilities for visiting this grand part.

One of our contemporaries giving Mr. Nicholson's measurement of Pike's Peak, "starting from a bench mark at the Log House, Colorado Springs" said, "But how was the altitude of the Log House obtained?" We thought we made it plain that the Log House is situated on the east of the D. & R. G. Railway, and that the levels of the Railway were run from the terminus of the K. P. Railway at Denver. The altitude of this starting point, we said, might be subject to correction, but it is to be presumed that the K. P. Engineers were accurate.

J. H. Sanderson & Company have put on a line of Coaches from Canon City to the San Juan Country. The coaches are to run every other day, and to make close connection with the D. & R. G. Railway.

Pueblo is starting a new industry—the manufacture of fine-tooth combs from the cactus. So says the Denver News.

The Pueblo people are "feeling good" over their railroad prospects. An eastern connection is the one thing needful, and they are working hard to secure it. They deserve success.

The Denver World says that a large number of shade trees in various parts of that city are dying for want of water. Evidently it was Denver, not Colorado Springs, that Farmer Meeker referred to a week or two ago.

Most of the emigrant "outfits" which come into this part of the country, have a fair complement of dogs with them. So those people who have been fearing that our stock of canines might give out, may now ease fear again.

The framework of the "Manitou Mansions" is tremendous, completed, and Messrs. Andrews & Davis, the contractors, have a large force at work on the building, so as to have it ready for the reception of guests as soon as possible.

It is good to see old familiar faces again. People now and then leave their departure from here, in search of a better, but most of them come back. It is a good thing for people to know when they are well off.

The Episcopal Church was crowded on Sunday morning last, when Canon Kingsley delivered a characteristic sermon—full of vigorous thought, but eminently plain and practical.

As the comet will soon plunge below the western horizon, it is desirable that no opportunities for taking observations should be lost. Young couples who have arranged to "observe" in company and compare notes, should, therefore, get out as early in the evening, and stay out as late, as circumstances will allow.

From the Greeley Tribune—"The Cottonwood says of the Box Elder: 'I am not afraid of the sun nor the wind, you stand behind me and I will protect you.' Then the Box Elder says the same thing to the Soft Maple, and the Soft Maple says the same thing to the Rag Wannu, and other trees; and all these say the same thing to the apple, and pear, and peach trees.

Nearly every newspaper now-a-days has a column or weekly article on "Cryptogamia." We haven't space for such, but if any of our readers are anxious to know all about the matter, let them import a mad dog, and persuade him to bite them. We say import a mad dog, for it is well known that mad dogs, like sunstrokes, are phenomena which never occur in Colorado.

Dr. Smith having offered a prize, for the pupil in the Preparatory Department of the College, who should receive the largest number of votes "for general good qualities," from fellow-pupils, four weekly ballots were taken, viz: on June 22nd, June 30th, July 7th, July 13th. The prize was awarded to Mr. R. S. Owen. Among those receiving a large number of votes were Miss Kimball, Miss Kennedy, and Miss Rebecca Cobb.

The Denver News has got a "Gas-Saving Governor," which works like a charm. Close observation shows that the saving of gas is over thirty per cent., and it is expected that at least one, if not two, of the collectors, can now be relieved from duty. The apparatus is especially commended to the gentlemen who are to run for the Delegate-ship in the coming campaign.

The Rev. Walter R. Moore, of Denver, who officiated here two Sundays ago, is off on a back-case, away beyond the Snowy Range, with a party of gentlemen. The Denver News says they will spend their time equally in fishing, in meditation and communing with Nature in their silent sanctuaries, with the bites carolling in the bushes about them, with various mosquitoes boring for their blood, and with the skimmers swimming in their unclean baskets.

Canon Kingsley's Lecture on Wednesday evening, was listened to with marked attention throughout, notwithstanding its length considerably exceeded that of ordinary lectures. It would be useless for us to attempt to give any resumé of the Lecture, for it no only speedily, with masterly power, the chief features of Westminster Abbey, the great English national mausoleum, but touched upon an almost innumerable number of suggested subjects. It must suffice to say that it afforded our citizens a rare treat.

St. Louis has a mining exchange, a new institution, in which there are about twenty large glass cases filled with mineral specimens from Colorado. The arrangement and classification are so made that the railway lines along which the ores occur are represented, affording those interested or capital seeking investment an opportunity to determine the proximation from the mines and furnaces of the masses of the world. From every locality in Colorado there are representative specimens of various mines and veins. There are also a great variety of crystals of the most beautiful forms. All the railroads in the Territory are represented. Minerals are mostly engaged, mounted upon blocks with bevelled edges, upon which the label is attached. A number of mineral offices have been opened within the exchange, to be used by mining companies. This enterprise is a credit to the city of St. Louis, and will do more to concentrate the mining interests of the region in that city than all other projects combined.

Green apples now deform the eyes of the doctors.

The Palace Amphitheatre Circus is billed and announced in our advertising columns to give two exhibitions in Colorado Springs on Wednesday next. It is now exhibiting in Denver, and the News says that, in its equipments, stock, and in the character of its performers, it has never had a rival in Colorado.

Chicago has been visited by another terrible Fire. Colorado Springs has her fire. Conflagration yet to come. You come, it probably will, some day or other; and, in order that we may be in some sort of readiness for it, we respectfully suggest that our present Fire Company,—who can only raise a chorus at their ordinary meetings—disband, and clear the way for some other organization. We cannot afford to risk everything to chance.

It seems almost past belief that the shade-trees which now grace our streets were stuck into the ground as bare poles, but little more than two years ago. For quickness and rapidity of growth, there is nothing like cottonwood, and the man who despises it has something yet to learn.

We are requested to announce that on the second Sunday of each month, until further notice, Services will be held in the Reading Room, over the GAZETTE office, by the Right Rev. Joseph P. Machebeuf, Bishop of the Roman Catholic Church. Services to commence at 9 o'clock, A.M. There will also be Evening Lecture at 7:30, P.M.

A number of robberies—of more or less magnitude—have lately been committed in the Town and neighborhood. One of the boldest of which we have heard was committed on Tuesday last, at the Rancho of Mr. Joseph Hemenway, four miles south of Town. Mr. Hemenway and his wife were out at Manitou, and their son and farm hands were at work on the Rancho. During their absence, a chest of drawers was ransacked, the contents strewed over the floor, and about two hundred and fifty dollars in currency carried off.

We are printing the Premium List for the Fair, to appear in the middle of September. It will be ready for issue in a few days, and we hope it will be consulted by every body of our Stockmen, Farmers, and others, so that they may learn for what Premiums are offered, and exert themselves to have a thoroughly good display in every class. There is no reason why the Fair should not be a great success and a great credit and benefit to the County, and everyone who can contribute to such a result should feel bound to do so.

The rain of Tuesday night gladdened the hearts of our farmers and gardeners, and they are now waiting for more with hopeful expectation. The appearance of the sky denotes that they will not have long to wait. Six weeks of drought and of extreme heat have made the season a very trying one, and we may congratulate ourselves that Colorado Springs and the surrounding section of country have passed through it so well. Water has been flowing continually through our cities: our shade-trees are flourishing in rich luxuriance: lawns and gardens look green and fresh; some crops and trees, which have never been irrigated at all, are looking fair; and, though there may have been some small losses of garden-stuff, they might have been avoided by a careful distribution of water which is scarce. There has been much more waste than want.

WHY PAT HASN'T PAID DOG TAX.

It would be a curious matter to ask why some people haven't paid Dog Tax; even their own consciences must find it difficult to frame an excuse. But Pat—is his surname doesn't matter much—has a thoroughly good reason for not having taken out a license.

Along in February or March last, Pat and his dog were at work up in Bergun's Park; Pat felling trees and the dog doing the superintending part of the business.

One day as Pat was chopping away at the trunk of a sucky pine-tree, and the dog was nosing around generally, seeing that everything was right, Pat espied, up in the branches of a neighboring tree, a fine specimen of the genus wild cat. That cat he resolved to have, or perish in the attempt.

Tying his dog at the foot of the tree, so as to make sure that the cat should not escape during his absence, he made for Carno, in order to procure the services of a rifle by arming himself with a large pocket-knife. Then, returning, he loosed the dog, and began work. His plan was to fell the tree and thus startle the cat, so that the dog and himself might have a fair chance with it.

Stroke after stroke of the axe went to the heart of the tree; it swayed over, it began to fall. Pat was all excitement and expectation; the dog was all eyes and ears.

But, alas for the vanity of human hopes! just as the tree-top neared the ground, the cat bounded thereof from the branches, dropped upon the back of the dog, gave one general "caw" of a cat's, which nearly took the wits of the poor brute; and then made off in double-quick time. Pat turned to his axe, after the cat, and managed to hit a big root, which made a considerable hole in the implement. The dog gave a heart-rending yell, and bolted in an opposite direction. And—he has never been seen since; that is why Pat hasn't paid Dog-Tax.

PERSONAL MENTIONS.

The Hon. J. B. Chaffee has returned to Denver. And still they are not happy there.

Edwin Booth, the eminent tragedian, is coming to Colorado for his health.

Col. Dodge, General Freight and Passenger Agent on the D. & R. G. Railway, has been paying a visit to Colorado Springs. He reports business to be exceedingly good.

James F. Schuyler, Esq., one of our former citizens, and who was of late staff of the D. & R. G. Railway, has been appointed Engineer of the Stockton and Tone Railway, California.

And his brother, Capt. Edward Schuyler, is to be married very shortly.

Tom Bowman is now a Cow-puncher in truth, which nobody can deny. He has just purchased 500 head of fine cattle.

Dr. Brewer, formerly of Chillicothe, Missouri, has taken up his residence in Colorado Springs, and will engage in the practice of Dentistry.

Bishop Machebeuf, of the Roman Catholic Church was in Town during the early part of the week, and made arrangements for regular services, particulars of which will be found in another column.

Grace Greenwood and her daughter have arrived in Denver, on their way to Manitou, to spend the Summer. There is no climate which suits Mrs. Lippincott like that of Colorado.

Mr. W. W. Foy, Secretary of the Colorado Stock-Growers' Association, favored us with a call early in the week. Mr. Foy has been here on business matters, as a representative of the Denver News.

Gov. Hunt has been in Town during the week.

Mr. W. W. Nevin, who spent the early portion of the Summer in Colorado Springs, has taken editorial charge of the Philadelphia Press, during the absence of Col. J. W. Forney, in Europe.

We acknowledge a pleasant call from Mr. D. C. Crawford, of the firm of Crawford & Jameson, Real Estate Agents, Denver. Mr. Crawford is an old citizen, and was formerly County Clerk of Jefferson County.

Mr. Fargo, of the firm of Wells, Fargo & Co., has been in Town for two or three days, looking after Express matters.

Dr. Robert E. Jamison, the Vice-President of the D. & R. G. Railway, who has been spending several weeks of the Summer here, left yesterday for Philadelphia, where the Eastern office of the Company is established.

The Rev. M. F. Sorenson, who has had charge of the Episcopal Services here since last Fall, has accepted a Call from Chris. Church, Canon City, and will immediately assume the Rectorship of that Parish. It is the intention of the Vestry there, to establish a first-class school—graded, if occasion requires—of which, we believe, Mr. Sorenson will be the Principal.

Professor Cope, the eminent Paleontologist and Naturalist, who spent a large part of last Summer in the Territory, and who secured here, as many of our readers will remember, on "Cope bone bed," is to spend the present season in Colorado, in following up his investigations of the remains of extinct species of vertebrate and invertebrate animals. He will work in connection with Lieut. Wheeler's Expedition.

General S. F. Browne, an attorney well known to many of our readers, has been disbarred by the Supreme Court of the Territory. Three charges were made against him, one of forging a deed, one of collecting a judgment of twelve hundred dollars and failing to pay it over to his client, and one of collecting four hundred dollars for lost baggage from the Kansas Pacific Railroad Company, for parties in Chicago and failing to remit the same. The first and second charges were not sustained, but the third, in the estimation of the court, was. Judge Belford delivered the unanimous opinion of the court, and pronounced the sentences disqualifying Gen. Browne from practicing in the District and Supreme Courts of this Territory, and also removing him from the position of Register of Bankruptcy, which he has held for several years.

Canon and Miss Kingsley left yesterday for Denver, and were to start this morning. They intend to visit Leadville and on the 25th. It is a matter of much regret that the stay of Canon Kingsley's party, during his stay here has prevented his obtaining that acquaintance with the country and the people which, we know, he would have been glad to obtain, for there are few men living who could more thoroughly and justly appreciate the peculiar characteristics of both, and who could do better service with the pen. His impressions, we are glad to know, are exceedingly favorable and his expressions of hearty interest and good-will at the close of his lecture the other evening were of the sincerest character. We are pleased to state that Canon and Miss Kingsley have promised to favor us with occasional contributions to our columns.

As the College School closes its session this week, the Rev. Mr. Edwards will cease, for the present, to conduct weekly Services in the Presbyterian Church, closing to-morrow evening with a Discourse to Young Men in Business.

EXPLORING EXPEDITIONS.

A division of the Hayden Exploring Expedition, under charge of Mr. A. D. Wilson, with Dr. Endlich as Geologist, Mr. Rhoda as Assistant Topographer, and Mr. Gallup as Barometrical Observer, arrived from Denver on Wednesday, and left on Thursday, for the Ute Pass, for the San Juan Country, where they are to spend the remainder of the Season in explorations. There will be five other divisions in the field, and the greater portion of Western Colorado is to be covered. Professor Hayden, who has charge of the whole expedition, is expected to arrive here in a day or two.

We were favored with a call, yesterday, from Dr. H. C. Yarrow, of the Wheeler Exploring Expedition, who furnished us with some particulars as to the Season's contemplated work. Lieut. Wheeler is expected to arrive in a day or two, and the expedition will then divide at Pueblo, into three portions, which will set out for their respective fields of labor. The first party will be commanded by Lieut. Wheeler, (who has charge of the whole expedition, with Lieut. Whipple as second in command. The two other divisions will each be divided into sub-parties, respectively commanded by Lieutenants Marshall, Birmie, Price, and Dent. The field of operations will be in the Valleys of the San Juan, Canadian, and Rio Grande. Mr. Allen, our local Taxidermist, will be attached to one of the parties. Professor Cope and Dr. Yarrow will devote the Season to Paleontological investigations in the neighborhood of Santa Fé. A branch of the expedition is already at work in Arizona.

BUILDING OPERATIONS.

Building is not so brisk as it was two or three months ago, still several new structures are under way, and others will be begun in the course of a few weeks.

The brick work north of the GAZETTE office, on Tejon Street, have been purchased by Mr. A. S. Walker, of Indiana, and work has been begun on a Brick Block, 50 feet by [illegible].

Baron & Bergman's Brick Block on Huerfano Street is being plastered and will very soon be ready for occupation. It consists of seven stores on the first floor, and about rooms on the second floor. The front is the best specimen of brickwork in Town, unless we except Geo. Tamblyn's store.

Stanley, White & Sweet will have a fine block on the corner of Cheyenne and Pike's Peak Avenue as may be judged from the extensive cellars, which have already been built.

Activity in Church-building still continues.

Arrangements are being made for the immediate erection of a German Catholic Church on the corner of Cascade and Rio Grande Streets, in the southern part of Town.

The stained windows for the Episcopal Church are expected to arrive to-day, and will be put in their places in the course of next week.

The Cumberland Presbyterian Church is rapidly approaching towards completion.

Residences are being put on various parts of the Town, and a general improvement in style may be noted.

Mr. Wolcott will have a large and handsome Villa on Cascade Avenue. The builders are making rapid progress with it, and its proportions are already well defined.

Mr. Geo. Summers has his residence, just to the north, nearly ready for occupation. The manner in which the roof is painted is a "new departure" and might be copied with advantage.

Mr. O. C. Barker is building on Pike's Peak Avenue.

Mr. Gibson is building a story and a half residence on Weber Street, near to Pike's Peak Avenue. Mr. Geo. V. Bentley is building a two story frame on the same street, near to Huerfano. Mr. Wittram has just completed a nice residence on the same.

Mr. Smith and Mr. Anderson have just finished houses on Cucharras St.

GLEN EYRIE.

Glen Eyrie, with its marvelous masses and pinnacles of many-colored rocks, and its beautiful and romantic Queen's Cañon, ranks high among the points of attraction which are clustered together here at the foot of Pike's Peak, and it is desirable that although it is private property—it should remain open to all who care to visit it. We regret, therefore, to learn that some of the visitors thither are so regardless of the minor beauties of the Glen—mostly its trees and shrubbery—that the owners will become exceedingly careless unless a little more care and consideration are shown, to exclude the general public. To drive of the roads, ride horses to trees and bushes, make pathways anywhere through the brush, and so forth, are things of common occurrence, and some visitors are not content even with such damages to the natural adornments of the place, but proceed to still less justifiable interferences. The other day a visitor cut down, with the hydraulic ram which has just been put in, in consequence of which it is now temporarily useless.

We hope that those who visit the Glen will remember that the grounds are private, and, before one of a family, to have every shrub and twig, and that they will be considerate accordingly. Their pleasure and not be a whit the less.

THE COLLEGE.

The closing of the first term of the Preparatory Department of the College was celebrated on Tuesday evening last by an exhibition in the City Hall, which attracted a large audience.

Professor Edwards, the Principal, opened the proceedings with a brief sketch of the progress which had been made, and incidentally stated that no less than ten States were represented by pupils in residence.

The programme was well rendered, and, if it were not invidious, where all did their best and deserved well, we should select for commendation Misses Rose Moore, Kate Kennedy, and Lily Kimball, and Messrs. Justin Edwards, Jr., W. Tutt, C. C. Kimball, R. S. Owen, and, though last in order, by no means meritoriously least, Mr. George Sargent.

The Lord's Prayer was sung well in unison, the words of which were enhanced by a clear intonation.

Mr. Justin Edwards, in his Salutatory Address, splendidly thought out, was—as is universally known—for his declamatory vigor, while of the Dialogues, and Tableaux Vivants, "Casting the Photograph," "Miss Dandridge's Visit," and "Love in Arcadia," we think as most, thanks to the forethought and taste of Mrs. S. S. Owen, Mrs. Eugene Sargent, and Miss Kennedy.

On Wednesday afternoon the Committee on Candidates for Admission to the Washington Class was before Gen. Walbach, calling up all of the Commercial Class, consisting of Messrs. Cassell, C. Edwards, Good, C. Washington, and the College teachers.

The Examination of pupils, and Class Standing, and Class Attendance were required, as to the studies pursued during the year, in Algebra, Grammar, Geography, English Composition, U. S. History, and the Sciences of Arithmetic. The two other subjects were Dictation Exercise of the Candidates from among the following: German and Greek, the Modern Languages, Physical Geography, Algebra, Natural Philosophy, and Physiology.

In the examination in each subject there was one Committee-man and one Teacher. The Committee-men were Messrs. Cassell, C. Edwards, Good, C. Washington, and Miss Kennedy, the others of the Committee, average age eighteen years, of those who attain. Much credit to the Examiners in behalf of themselves for the examination, and general average of the other subjects in September next.

Hon. Chas. Devens presented diplomas, to which time has added absolutely, and thus an object lesson was presented to assist the conception we have stated, two failed through the examination of too early subjects. The Candidates received their papers by numbers, and the Class was then dismissed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

CAMBRIDGE AND BOSTON, MASS., July 4, 1874.

Dear Editor of the Colorado Springs Gazette:

I have not forgotten that proposed to me we ever pledged in my letter to let you hear from readers know of new wheresoever I am, what see at each of the stopping places. And now, after so long a time, from the cradle of July, my native land, on the 4th of July, my native town, and take a little wicked pride in writing to my old state. English friends my first foreign letter from this seat of learning and intellectual liberty. I will not be surprised if to date my letter on Bunker Hill, the battle there both origins long ago, and sun red blood was mingled on the 17th of June, nearly one hundred years ago; yet the New England liberty to state from the seat of Warren on this day. Our National independence of the British Crown is acknowledged as virtually ended (July 4, 1775) by the men who signed the names of the colleges before men to that ever memorable declaration that the United States ought and shall be free and independent of all foreign powers. In history

> There Cause have mighty sway with men
> Beyond the sceptre and the pen.

And it is interesting to notice that the birthday of our nation commemorates the superiority of the pen to both the sword and the sceptre.

The Declaration of Independence is the command of the sword and the defiance of the sceptre by the almost inspired assertions of the pen of the fathers of those sons and patriotic men, who, in the fear of God, were ready to pledge to liberty "their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor!" and England and America are both better for what they did.

But Mr. Editor, I do not write on this National Anniversary nor date my letters from Harvard College and the cradle of liberty in Boston, with the intention of occupying any space with a "Glorious Fourth of July" speech; but simply because on this holiday I have nothing to do with persons now or pulpits for the Colorado College, which is my first object to bring at and effort every day in the year. To-day, the business houses are closed, the men, women, and children are now at home. Boston, and "the rest country round about," are having a most glorious (republican, or rather, democratic) good time generally, and, as I never yet learned how to have a good reason of any sort, as a basis and go to the next session, I am writing a running article for the press. On the mean time, the speech of Hon. Richard Frothingham, the dancing of the children, and the ascending balloons, etc., etc., will go on quite as well as if I were present or omnipresent at them all.

When I left Colorado on the sixth of May, my plans were to be in New York and Boston on their two successive anniversary weeks, occurring in that month, but, by correspondence, I learned that those important weeks were omitted in the calendar; this was for want of encouragement that the many benevolent objects would be sufficiently attended to warrant the celebration at so much expense. I also learned that our friend, Rev. Dr. Post, of St. Louis, who had invited me to become his guest, was gone away, and that it was wiser to pass the Mound City by, that one good man got back. So I switched off the train at Kansas City and hurried to Chicago. I saw there for a day or two so many Pikes peakers men, that, after sharing the hospitality and generous good cheer of Hon. W. F. Austin, I took the cars which carried me to the City of Brotherly Love, where I found over all Pikes peak men who had been to Colorado or have interests there, and with them I "talked College" night and day and Sundays, too, for some two weeks. Philadelphia is one of the noblest cities I ever knew, and although my words is not of the welcome, winning sort, I saw kind men and happy faces there which I shall never forget or fail to love. If not, however, have the good fortune to see the man who will make the Rocky Mountain College its immortal monument; and, as you know, I am after some such leverages whose sense of the useful, good, and grand may lead them to give us largely and lend the van of our benefactors. So I came eastward to attend the college anniversaries of Connecticut and Massachusetts, which have been in due course succession for several weeks, and are not over yet. Interspersed among these are several ecclesiastical meetings of importance which have not engaged. At Putnam, a new manufacturing town, named, perhaps, after the famous Israel and the wolf, the General Association of Connecticut held a very interesting session of several days, and a similar body of representatives of the churches in the Old Bay State, convened at the same time at Lynn, the busy shoe town of Massachusetts, and discussed all the interests of church and state, and foreign fields, which belong to men of faith and matter of fact to consider. These both these bodies I represented the claims of Colorado and received warm assurance of their kind encouraging regard.

At the last of these meetings the courageous secretary, who has traveled round the world addressing and instructing large assemblies as he went, and at his leisure spent a Sabbath at Amherst to address the multitudes and their friends, upon the ways of God in science and missionaries. The President, Dr. Stevens, whose collection gave us the geology, Dana, Hart, and Agassiz, is in his last and deepest sorrow in the sudden deceased of another dear one, in whom he carried for space and support. His wealth of personality appeared in its most impressive form in the spirit and manners of that afflicted father, a great, good man indeed; whose attention to business interests in the many roads in other men placed under his command appeared careful. President Stevens's experience and education secularly title to oversee over the interests of Amherst College, and that important and beautifully located College was never more prosperous than it is now. Got, let it not give past now, the number of noble looking youths who moved respectfully in the College Church; but it does not for much from those of Yale and Harvard now, where are larger than ever in their history before.

To whose father was a famous and most talented Professor there, I might indeed more sorely than even Dr. Stevens can tell you of the beauties and increasing wealth of his worthy institution among the Amherst hills. Just as it started in its times and place, so it is to-day, high in our affections, and full of Colorado Springs. For in [illegible] Van Dreen, at two [illegible] Terrace, No. 3 [illegible] San Francisco.

The undersigned having purchased at a very low figure the property heretofore belonging to the estate of Gen. H. L. Sweet, deceased, are prepared to sell the same in lots to suit purchasers, at prices very much lower than those for which similar property is being sold in the Territory. PERSONALITIES.

Nilsson's last season made her $87,240 richer.

The author of the "John Brown" song of war times, is said, by a correspondent of the Boston Transcript, to be Mr. Charles Sprague, of Charlestown, "a man of strong abolition principles, and a somewhat eccentric muse." This song was really the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," Mrs. Howe's being of too mystical and metaphysical a quality to accompany fife, tack and drum marches.

It has been reported that Father Hyacinthe has been making efforts to secure a reconciliation with the Pope, but this rumor is set at rest by the following quotation from a sermon recently preached defining his position: "With a willing heart," said he, "I would be reconciled with the Church, but upon two conditions—first, that he renounce his personal infallibility; and secondly, that he should consent to dress the cradle of my child."

Nellie Grant's mother-in-law is no less a personage than Adelaide Kemble, the youngest and last of the Kemble family, daughter of Charles and niece of the great John Kemble and Mrs. Siddons. Adelaide Kemble made her début on the lyric stage at Covent Garden Theatre, 1841, and, after a year of the most complete musical and dramatic success that ever attended any artiste, fell in love with and married Mr. Bartolozzi, and at once retired from the stage, and it is to their only son that Nellie Grant is married. A connection certainly well worthy of proud remembrance.

The man who runs Wall street is a little dark-eyed, dark-skinned, black-haired diminutive gentleman who hasn't seen Wall street in six months. He does it by telegraph from his private residence on the corner of Forty-seventh street and Fifth Avenue, whose stuffy furnished basement is his throne. Ticker is his sceptre. The unpretending aristocrat of stocks is the only man whom Vanderbilt is afraid of. He is the man who said Erie a relic of many millions made millions by the operation, and is other name is Jay Gould.

The late Stephen Whitney, the millionaire, was very economical. When boarding at the Astor House, at one time, he used to engage in giving his grandchildren practical lessons in the affairs of life. He took one of the boys who he thought had an expensive liking to out on the docks, where a number of country sloops with hickory poles were putting the fish out very lively. The boy, however, after hesitating even a full round, and finding no man gave him a lesson from the circumstance, showing that those who achieve success in life are not always those blessed with the most advantages.

Some curious gossip about Prince Bismarck is given by a German correspondent of a London paper. The Prince has long been in the habit of retiring to rest after midnight, drinking regularly one or two bottles of champagne as a sleeping potion. He dotes on old comfortable home, and only in the most rare cases attends balls and assemblies. His pictures, caricatures, and all the cartoons and sketches respecting him are carefully collected by his daughter and placed in albums. The more absurd the caricatures in Berlin comic journals, such as the Kladderadatsch, Wespen, Ulk, and Humorist, are the more he laughs. He has a great liking for journalists, and Cluny are all for Bismarck.

I hope that no expectations were entertained in the United States concerning honors to be made to the President's daughter on her arrival here as Mrs. Sartoris. The papers record the act of her marriage in a single batch of five or six lines, but no mention has been made of her arrival with her husband in England. In fact, the opinion seems to be that the young lady made a mésalliance, and has placed herself at a great disadvantage. As Miss Grant, the daughter of the American President, she was welcomed here by the whole aristocracy, received by the Queen; but as Mrs. Sartoris, the wife of an English cast-iron engineer, she is nobody—scarcely knowing whether she can be presented at court. It is to be hoped that she will not be made unhappy by the change which her marriage has wrought in her position.—Court Journal, London Correspondence.

The will of the late Shepherd Thompson shows how thoroughly he was devoted to the business to which he gave his life, and in which he gained so much distinction. After providing for his wife, two sisters, children, and a nephew, as trustees are to apply the net income of the estate, after payments specified, or so much as may be judiciously applied, thereto, to the education and maintenance of Roman orphans of railway employees, whose fathers have been killed while in discharge of their duties. Preference is to be given to the orphans of employees engaged upon the Pennsylvania railroad; second, to those of the Georgia railroad; third, to those of lines controlled by the Pennsylvania railroad by lease or otherwise; fourth, of other employees of any railroad company in the United States of America. The estate is valued at $2,500,000. He constitutes one of the most remarkable charities on record, and shows that one man, at least, appreciates the value of the survivors of men who serve their lives every day.

A lady writes of the new Queen of the Sandwich Islands as follows: "I can't say what kind of a sensation she would create in Boston literary society; but to one accustomed to Asiatic features and dusky colors, she makes a very pleasing picture. She is about thirty-five years of age, a little above the average height, portly in person, and carries herself with a queenly dignity becoming her station, which dignity is entirely natural to her, as it is to most of the Hawaiian women. She speaks so little English that she does not trust herself to use this language in company, so conversation is somewhat difficult; but her bright, pleasant, intelligent expression makes up for a great deal else. She had a reception of the ladies of Honolulu at the palace a few weeks ago, and her manners were worthy of any lady in the land, while her dress was simply neat, but rich enough to suit her rank. Her younger days she was nurse to the son of the present Queen Dowager, and was said to be very beautiful. It was then thought that Kapaana lowered herself somewhat in marrying one below him in rank, but to my mind it was a very creditable thing. I like over her, and respect him all the more for it. I saw their Majesties lately at a grand party given on board the Semiramis, and on that occasion she looked a Queen of whom her husband might surely be proud."

THE FUNNY MAN OF CONGRESS.

The funny man of the House last Winter, says the Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, was said to be Mr. Nesmith, of Oregon, who tells on himself some very amusing stories. He served one term in the Senate several years ago, and a few days after he was passing one of the cloak rooms, and inside was Messrs. Essenden, Morris, and several others, whose names we can't call to mind, they have all gone, invited him in, and, after conversing for a few moments, they asked him, very abruptly:

"Mr. Nesmith, you have come from a very wide country, where you say the greater portion of your life has been passed. Will you tell us what first struck you on coming to the Senate?"

"When I took my seat in this august body, said to be composed of the brains of the country, I was overwhelmed with the strangeness of the one idea—how I came to be here."

"Oh! Ah! Ugh! So! And then, Mr. Nesmith, what then? What was your next cause for wonder?"

"The next thing, gentlemen," answered Nesmith, slowly gathering up his great length, "that came to me and puzzled me more than the first thought, was how in the deuce all you others got here!"

There was a shout, and from that day these old fossils who had thought to over-awe, by their pomposity, the crude young Senator, were his sworn friends, and never neglected an opportunity to tell the story.

THE WOOL MARKET.

We are in receipt from Messrs. Coates Bros., Philadelphia, of their Wool Circular for July, from which we make the following extracts:—

The wool market has now fairly opened. Supplies are coming forward liberally, and all the wool houses have probably some assortment on hand. Stocks are, however, yet very moderate, but there is no longer the scarcity which was noticeable a few weeks ago. In some parts of the country a considerable part of the clip has passed into second hands at good prices for the grower. In other sections very little has yet been bought, the wool being temporarily held above the views of the buyers. The fall trade for goods is generally regarded as promising, crops in a majority of sections being good, and the financial policy passed by Congress regarded with favor. Although these acts promise an increase in trade, yet we cannot look for any marked advance in prices, as this would at once check buyers from operating freely, for the fact must not be lost sight of that goods are relatively lower than wool. Wool is now some three or four cents higher than it was at this time last year, while manufactured goods are considerably lower. Manufacturers cannot, therefore, pay an advance for wool unless goods should improve very materially. With prices as they now are, the mills that are running will continue to buy cautiously, and, with an improvement in the volume of trade, we may look for the idle machinery to be set in motion so that the production of goods will be increased and demand for wool stronger, yet without little change in prices. During the next few months the Eastern markets will have a good supply of wool, and the factories will not purchase foreign stock while they can get plenty of domestic at fair prices. Trade during the past month has been fair at our quotations.

The quotations for Colorado and New Mexican Wools, are as follows:

Washed, fine choice selected, new clip	28@30
Washed, average grades	25 " 27
Washed, fine	18 " 20
Unwashed, average grades	22 " 25
Unwashed, coarse	22 " 23
Unwashed, fine	17 " 18

TWO ENGLISH TASTES.

We find in the correspondence of the Boston Herald two things in matters which are peculiar. One is the habit the writers for Punch, and notably the editors thereof, have of leaving their families penniless. First comes Thackeray, then Leach, then Mark Lemon, and now Shirley Brooks. The latter, for the last ten years of his life at least, must have earned an income averaging two thousand pounds a year, and yet he leaves his wife and children the interest only of an insurance policy, being an income of some one hundred and fifty pounds per annum on which to live! His house was a good one; his rooms were usually full of excellent company. You saw there the academician, the popular actor, the opera singer, the county physician, the poet, the traveler. And yet all this was dependent upon health, which was notoriously frail. Another habit is one which the British Parliament has of putting down an obnoxious member by all kinds of mimicry and catcalling and coughing and stamping of feet, like the shilling gallery of a theatre. This is the way that unpolished body greeted Mr. Jenkins, of Ennis's bully fame, and known among us last winter as a lecturer. Mr. Jenkins has an irritating style. He conveys the impression that he has searched from Dan to Beersheba and found no one so tremendously clever as himself. It is conceit to be something to be seen to be understood. That long, narrow head, hollow demeanor, and draggle style of delivery put the house out of patience, and all sorts of cries were raised. An unfortunate slip of her late Majesty's government instead of her Majesty's late government was caught up and reiterated, and some of the members' mimicries as to pronunciation of the word Ashantee. It is rare for a new man when the House of Commons adopts this sort of treatment towards him. The next thing was to call upon him to sing as they call upon Mr. Whalley to do."

MARK TWAIN AND THE BOOK-AGENT.

A book-seller visited Mark Twain at home, to get his subscription for a new work, of which he carried a copy. He found the genial Mark sitting in his garden. He was kindly received, and asked to take a seat. He took a seat. The seat was on top of a fence, the uppermost rail of which was sharp. He was not happy when he sat down, and he got no happier as he remained. He remained there, too, a very long while, and Mr. Twain was very amusing to his visitor about the book and its author, whom he knew; about the pictures and the letter-press, and then he branched off into other and very indefinite literary subjects, of which the agent knew nothing. After an hour or so Twain hospitably asked the agent into the house, and then he talked to him some more. The agent was getting very tired and very hungry. Twain excused himself for a moment, and staid away for an hour, during which time the agent suspects he took his dinner. He came back, and was still very sinful and talked again. It was now nearly 6 p.m., and the agent had come about 11 a.m. He had had nothing to eat, and not a word had been said about subscription. He grew desperate and asked Twain if he would subscribe. "I think well," crawled Twain, "but not to-day—come to-morrow and we will talk about it." The agent accepted, and he now swears—though he had a nice time, and Twain is a good talker—that he will never go back again; no, never.

RATHER ROUGH ON HIM.

An English paper gives a ludicrous account of the adventures of a youth who set out to attend a fancy ball. He resolved to appear in a novel character, and therefore choose the costume of his early ancestors according to Darwin. His clothing was manufactured by a furrier, except an ultra-rubber tail. He looked in the glass and pronounced himself a first-class monkey in looks and appearance. As the distance from his hotel to the ball-room was short and his finances had been taxed in procuring his wardrobe, he resolved to walk instead of hiring a carriage. His presence attracted considerable attention on the street, but he was not molested to the metetwo immense and very fierce dogs, who immediately pounced upon him. To shout for a policeman was not in keeping with his assumed character, so with true beast agility he prepared to the top of a high and sharp fence to await the coming of some friend in human form. But, unfortunately, a dog came on, obscuring the gas-lights, and no one ventured into the street. So he remained "treed" for several hours, during which time he became tired of paying money.

THE SECRET OF POWER.

A gentleman one day earnestly requested Mr. Webster to speak in the Senate on an important subject. "I have not time," was the reply; "I have no time to master the subject so as to do it justice." "But, Mr. Webster," urged the applicant, "a few words from you would be sufficient to awaken public attention to it." "No," there is such weight in my words as you represent because I do not allow myself to speak on any subject till I have immersed my mind within it."

"Men give me credit for genius," said Alexander Hamilton; "all the genius I have lies in this—when I have a subject in hand, I study it profoundly. Day and night it is before me. I explain it in all its bearings; my mind becomes penetrated with it. Then the truth which I have elicited appears like a flash of light across my path. This is the whole secret of my success."
